FATALITY AT REIGATE.
Foolhardy ride on a Trolley.

Mr. F. J. Nightingale, late coroner, had an inquiry at the Black Horse Inn, Reigate, on Thursday, into the death of Henry Egan, of Dunstable, before he was born. The inquest was opened by Mr. Nightingale, who, in the course of the proceedings, expressed his sympathy with the mother of the deceased, Mrs. Egan. The coroner had received a certificate from the health authority, stating that the deceased had been in receipt of benefit, and that he had been born in the workhouse. The inquest was adjourned until the next week.

Mr. J. H. W. Smith, of the railway company, was present at the inquest, but it was not known whether he was there for the purpose of giving evidence or to prevent the coroner from proceeding with the inquiry.

FATALITY AT REIGATE.

By Mr. Hale. He saw deceased trying to break the trolley, but it appeared that he was not successful.

By Dr. John Gilt. Ogle, a medical practitioner, he saw deceased trying to break the trolley, but it appeared that he was not successful.

By Mr. Walter, the railway company's agent, who was present at the scene of the accident, he saw deceased trying to break the trolley, but it appeared that he was not successful.

By Mr. H. Ormrod, the railway company's agent, who was present at the scene of the accident, he saw deceased trying to break the trolley, but it appeared that he was not successful.

By Mr. W. H. Lambourne, the railway company's agent, who was present at the scene of the accident, he saw deceased trying to break the trolley, but it appeared that he was not successful.

By Mr. H. B. M. Reid, the railway company's agent, who was present at the scene of the accident, he saw deceased trying to break the trolley, but it appeared that he was not successful.

By Mr. E. J. T. M. Reid, the railway company's agent, who was present at the scene of the accident, he saw deceased trying to break the trolley, but it appeared that he was not successful.

By Mr. J. H. W. Smith, the railway company's agent, who was present at the scene of the accident, he saw deceased trying to break the trolley, but it appeared that he was not successful.

By Mr. H. Ormrod, the railway company's agent, who was present at the scene of the accident, he saw deceased trying to break the trolley, but it appeared that he was not successful.

By Mr. W. H. Lambourne, the railway company's agent, who was present at the scene of the accident, he saw deceased trying to break the trolley, but it appeared that he was not successful.

By Mr. H. B. M. Reid, the railway company's agent, who was present at the scene of the accident, he saw deceased trying to break the trolley, but it appeared that he was not successful.

By Mr. E. J. T. M. Reid, the railway company's agent, who was present at the scene of the accident, he saw deceased trying to break the trolley, but it appeared that he was not successful.

By Mr. J. H. W. Smith, the railway company's agent, who was present at the scene of the accident, he saw deceased trying to break the trolley, but it appeared that he was not successful.